Human rights groups win European Court of Human Rights claim on UK mass surveillance regime

Eight year legal battle against UK mass surveillance programmes exposed by whistleblower Edward Snowden culminates in victory for privacy.

KEY POINTS

- The Grand Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights has today issued a landmark ruling that the UK's mass surveillance regime violates people's rights to privacy and freedom of expression.
- This surveillance regime was first exposed by whistleblower Edward Snowden in 2013.
- This will have an impact not only in the UK but across Europe.

KEY POINTS

- Under the agreement, G-7 nations will back a global minimum corporate tax of at least 15%, U.K. Finance Minister Rishi Sunak announced in a series of tweets.
- The reforms will affect the largest companies in the world with profit margins of at least 10%.
- U.S. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen, who is in London for the face-to-face meeting, hailed the move as significant and unprecedented.
